Boston hosting World Pokemon Championships

Battle. The fun kicks off on Friday at the Hynes Convention Center, and champions could take home up to $25,000 in prize money.

Pikachu and friends are coming to Boston this weekend as the Pokemon World Championships kicks off here in the Hub.

This is the big one for followers of the iconic Japanese game. Thousands are expected to descend on the Hynes Convention Center starting Friday, squaring off over Pokemon cards and video games. The event runs through Sunday.

Pokemon VIP scheduled to attend include Tsunekazu Ishihara, president and CEO of The Pokemon Company; Junichi Masuda, director, Game Freak, Inc.; and Shigeru Ohmori, game director, Game Freak, Inc.

It's invitation-only for the world's best duelers from worldwide tournaments. But amateur Pokemon fans are also invited to attend and play one another on the side, ac-

No Trump. Immigration groups push for statewide Trust Act

From Beacon Hill to Capitol Hill to Trump Tower in Manhattan, the issue of immigration is taking center stage in public policy debates.

One year after the Boston City Council passed the Trust Act, which dissuades police officers from detaining a person due to immigration status, immigrant activists converged on the steps of the State House, calling on Beacon Hill to adopt a statewide version of the Trust Act.

They also protested DHS's Priority Enforcement Program, demanded a face-to-face meeting with Gov. Charlie Baker and called out Republican presidential hopeful Donald Trump on his plan to nix birth-right citizenship.

"The deportation machine is still active and functioning," Centro Presente Executive Director Patricia Montes said. "We're also here to let our governor know that here in Massachusetts, we don't want another Donald Trump."

Baker has voiced opposition to any bills that would provide legal leeway for undocumented immigrants in Massachusetts, which has set off a reaction from the same local activists groups and legislators who pushed the Trust Act.

Stories of unauthorized entry in order to flee violence and poverty have given a face to the ongoing struggle.

Marylyn Granados, who once was lawyer in El Salvador, said she walked into Texas with her husband and two daughters after a gang slipped a note with a bullet attached to it under their door.

Granados did not plan to turn herself in to the authorities, but she was detained in Texas and is now seeking political asylum. Speaking through a translator, Granados criticized Baker for his recent veto threat over legislation providing legal protections for undocumented immigrants.

"I came to the United States on the 25th of June this year."

Granados said. "My two daughters and my husband fled the violence and the poverty that put us in serious danger."

About 2.5 percent of Massachusetts' population is undocumented immigrants, according to the Pew Research Center: Hispanic Trends. Lawmakers passed the Trust Act to give undocumented immigrants the ability to report crimes they may have seen or been a victim of without repercussion. Prior to the Trust Act, members of immigrant communities, documented or not, were reluctant to report crimes because they then could be targeted and detained through the Secure Communities Act, a legal pipeline for authorities to check immigration status in a federal database. NATE HOMAN

Two Southie brothers accused of beating, urinating on homeless man

Two South Boston brothers were arrested Wednesday morning after police say they urinated on and beat a homeless man near the JFK T station in Dorchester.

State Police said Scott Leader, 38, and Steve Leader, 30, both from Old Colony Avenue in South Boston, were on the way home from a Red Sox game when they assaulted a 58-year-old man who was asleep in a sleeping bag, beating him with a metal pole.

The victim received treatment for a broken nose and bruises to his head and torso, according to police.

Scott Leader allegedly referred to the victim as an "illegal immigrant" and said police arrested the brothers because they were white.

Both brothers were aggressive in their jail cells, "exposing themselves and urinating in the cell, challenging troopers to come into the cells to fight, banging on the cell door and making threatening and anti-immigration statements," according to the State Police. The men faced a long list of charges: assault and battery with a dangerous weapon (the pole), assault and battery with a dangerous weapon (urine), open and gross lewdness, indecent exposure and a raft of other charges. The brothers were set to be arraigned Wednesday in Dorchester District Court. SPENCER BUELL sprayed, beaten with a metal baton and arrested.

"The MBTA has signs everywhere telling people, 'If you see something, say something.' This is exactly what Ms. Holmes did. She saw something wrong, and she spoke out. We need more people to follow Ms. Holmes' lead and do the same," Jessie Rossman, staff attorney at the ACLU of Massachusetts, said in a news release. "Unfortunately, the officers' reactions are part of a broader, troubling trend in which police officers mistreat individuals exercising their constitutional rights. It has to stop."

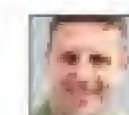

"While the MBTA doesn't ordinarily comment on pending litigation, the allegations contained within the complaint are concerning to the Authority. The MBTA takes these allegations very seriously," an MBTA spokesperson said in an email.

MBTA Police unjustly beat, pepper-sprayed and detained a Roxbury woman, according to a lawsuit.

With the American Civil Liberties Union as her counsel, Mary Holmes filed a civil rights lawsuit in the U.S. District Court of Massachusetts against MBTA officers Jennifer Garvey and Alfred Trihn. Holmes tried to quell a tense interaction between Garvey and an older black woman at Dudley Station in March of 2014, according to the complaint.

Holmes claimed that she was trying to get Garvey to be less aggressive toward the woman.

Once this didn't work, Holmes claims that she then called 911 and was pepper-

Airport workers protest

A group of airport workers, labor leaders and elected officials rallied Wednesday outside South Station in Boston to protest the unfair labor practices of contracted airplane cleaners and baggage handlers at Logan Airport by the airline contractor G2 Secure Staff.

BBQ. Boston talks peace over burgers with homicide victims' families

After a violent week in Boston, city officials on Wednesday were connecting with families touched by tragedy.

A few dozen came out for the city's fifth-annual barbecue for those who've lost loved ones to homicide, hosted by Boston Police outside BPD headquarters. Among the balloons and burgers, community groups and officers chatted with residents and talked peace in an effort to put a damper on crime.

The message for families, Boston Mayor Marty Walsh told Metro, is Boston hasn't forgotten them.

"They're remembered by their city, they're remembered by their police department and we understand the trauma and the loss that they went through," Walsh said.

The event came after a spate of shootings around Boston that killed five — in Roxbury, Mattapan, Everett and Cambridge — and a disturbing blaze of gunfire outside a Roxbury memorial service Monday (no one was injured).

But Walsh and Police Commissioner William Evans stressed violent crime is low in the city. Twenty homicides so far this year is relatively few, Evans said, but reducing gun violence, particularly among youth, remains a focus.

"We see young kids firing randomly, and we're having more victims as a result of that," Evans said. "We've just got to get a hold of this small increase in shootings."

Officials on Wednesday also announced Boston is restarting its gun-buyback program, offering illegal gun-holders $200 to turn the weapons in at one of 12 locations citywide. "Your Piece for Peace" is the program's tagline. SPENCER BUELL

Former Subway pitchman charged with paying for sex with minors

Sandwich chain.

Subway fired Fogle on Tuesday when reports of the plea agreement emerged.

Former Subway sandwich chain pitchman Jared Fogle asked a federal judge on Wednesday to accept his plea of guilty to charges of child pornography and traveling for illicit paid sex with minors.

Federal Judge Mark Dinsmore must now review the plea deal Fogle's attorneys reached with prosecutors and decide whether to accept it. In the meantime the court entered a technical plea of not guilty on Fogle's behalf.

Fogle, who became famous after losing a lot of weight on a diet that included Subway sandwiches, was placed on home detention and must wear an electronic monitoring device. No date has been set for his next appearance.

Under the deal, Fogle would serve between five and 12 years in prison, pay $1.4 million in restitution to 14 minor victims and register as a sex offender.

According to the charges, Russell Taylor, head of the Jared Foundation set up to combat child obesity, secretly taped 12 minors while they changed clothes and showered at his home, including two who were as young as 13 or 14. He shared the images with Fogle, who knew they showed minors, prosecutors said.

Prosecutors said Fogle also received commercial child pornography from Taylor, viewed it and failed to report it. He stored explicit images of children as young as six.

Fogle traveled to New York City at least twice between 2010 and 2013 seeking sex with minors, and paid for sex acts with a girl he knew to be 17 years old and another girl younger than 18. He told the first girl he would "make it worth her while" if she could find him another minor to have sex with, "the younger the girl, the better," according to the indictment. REUTERS

Hackers' Ashley Madison data dump wreaks havoc

Love lives and reputations may be at risk after the release of customer data from infidelity website Ashley Madison on Tuesday, a dramatic move likely to rattle users' attitude toward the Internet.

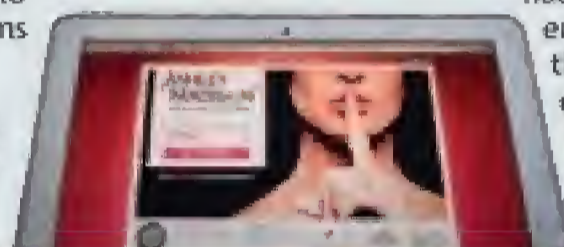

Hackers dumped a big cache of data containing millions of email addresses for U.S. government officials, U.K. civil servants and high-level executives at European and North American corporations late on Tuesday, the latest cyberattack to raise concerns about Internet security and data protection.

Identifying members of a marital cheating website appeared aimed at maximum damage to the individuals, causing public embarrassment and potentially hurting relationships, rather than financial gain.

Last month, the hackers threatened to leak nude photos, sexual fantasies, real names and credit card information for as many as 37 million customers worldwide of Ashley Madison, which uses the slogan "Life is short. Have an affair."

Twitter was abuzz, with "hack" trending in fourth place. Most comments expressed horror that people's identities were exposed and many were astonished people had apparently used their work emails to sign up to the site. REUTERS

Atlantic may see first 2015 hurricane as Danny strengthens

Tropical Storm Danny is on track to become the first hurricane of the 2015 Atlantic season by Friday and could approach the Caribbean islands by the late weekend, the U.S. National Hurricane Center said.

It is still too early to predict whether Danny, currently a tropical storm with winds gusting up to 50 miles per hour, will impact the United States, said Dennis Feltgen, a meteorologist and spokesman for the hurricane center in Miami.

Danny is the fourth named storm of what is expected to be a quieter-than-normal Atlantic hurricane season, he said. REUTERS

Wildfires trigger new evacuation in Northwest

Wildfires raging across the U.S. Northwest triggered new evacuation orders for hundreds of homes as firefighters battled more than a dozen major blazes across drought-parched western states, authorities said on Wednesday.

13-year-old may face trial as adult in death of toddler

A 13-year-old Tulsa boy has been charged with child abuse murder in the death of his 2-year-old cousin and may be tried as an adult for the crime, prosecutors said.

The 13-year-old was charged on Tuesday for the death of Charity Simmons in Tulsa in June. Medical examiners said the death was caused by violent blunt force trauma.

Suspects aged 13 or 14 can be charged in Oklahoma as an adult as long as they are first certified as a youthful offender. A judge will have to decide whether the 13-year-old will face trial as an adult, prosecutors said.

3-D printed drone launched from warship

A team of engineers from the University of Southampton launched a 3-D printed unmanned aerial vehicle from the bow of a Royal Navy warship in a bid to demonstrate the potential use of lightweight drones at sea.

After being launched from HMS Mersey off the Dorset coast in the south of England, the UAV was flown autonomously on a pre-programmed route before landing on Chesil Beach.

Known as the Southampton University Laser Sintered Aircraft, the drone weighed 6.6 pounds with a wingspan of nearly 4.9 feet. The airframe was created on a 3-D printer using laser-sintered nylon, which uses a laser to fuse nylon powder into solid structures. REUTERS

Istanbul palace attacked, eight soldiers are killed

Violence. There was no claim of responsibility for the attack at Dolmabahce Palace.

Gunmen fired on police outside an Istanbul palace and a bomb killed eight soldiers in the southeast on Wednesday, heightening a sense of crisis as Turkey's leaders struggled to form a new government.

The Istanbul governor's office said two members of a "terrorist group" armed with hand grenades and an automatic rifle were caught after attacking the Dolmabahce Palace, which is popular with tourists.

Militants from the Kurdistan Workers Party (PKK), meanwhile, killed eight soldiers with a roadside bomb in the southeastern province of Siirt, the military said, intensifying a conflict there after the breakdown of a two-year cease-fire last month.

Shortly before the bomb attack, Turkish F-16 warplanes had hit and destroyed PKK shelters along Turkey's border with Iraq, the Hurriyet newspaper said. The report could not immediately be confirmed.

The unrest in the NATO member state comes weeks after it declared a "war on terror," opening up its air bases to the U.S.-led coalition against Islamic State, launching air strikes on Kurdish militants, and detaining more than 2,500 suspected members of radical Kurdish, far-leftist and Islamist groups.

Why Kristen Stewart is a great actress

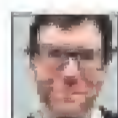

Kristen Stewart won a Cesar, the French equivalent of the Oscar, for the European drama "Clouds of Sils Maria." JEC FILMS

THE FUN STARTS HERE

Do you hate on that girl from "Twilight"? You shouldn't. She's a serious thespian.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metroweek.com

Before she scored the "Twilight" gig, Kristen Stewart was simply a young actress. Among her first wave of raves was for a small but key part in "Into the Wild" — a role that acclaimed French filmmaker Olivier Assayas ("Carlos") said made him want to work with her. Assayas would belatedly cast Stewart in "Clouds of Sils Maria," which netted her a Cesar — the French equivalent of the Oscar — for Best Supporting Actress earlier this year. She was the first American to get the accolade.

Around the time of "Into the Wild"'s release in the fall of 2007, Stewart landed the coveted role of Bella Swan in "Twilight" when she was just 17. Her life was never the same again, and not exactly for good. Her existence became a nonstop surveillance hellsuck, her every move documented, her talk show appearances obsessively scrutinized, her sex life salivated upon by every publication.

Perhaps worse, her brand suffered. Critics and non-Twi-hard audiences quickly turned to pouncing on Stewart, the star of a beloved but critically dreadful franchise that called on her to swoon for a pale vampire and an often shirtless werewolf hunk.

Right now, it's surprising that Stewart won a fancy European acting award, and for a movie that's 80 percent her onscreen with French icon Juliette Binoche. But it shouldn't be surprising. Stewart has always been a unique screen presence — a thespian of great subtlety.

GETTY IMAGES

Granted, sometimes her minimalist approach — those very, very tiny scrunches of the eyes or slight modulations of where her jaw rests — has been interpreted as mere vacuity. Perhaps her early public appearances didn't help. On talk shows she often seemed detached — or at least she wasn't yet comfortable with a profoundly inhuman form of interaction few of her fans or detractors could ever imagine.

As she's gotten older, Stewart has become more articulate, more bold, more confident and more easily vexed, especially when it comes to her privacy. She has a type, much the way classic Hollywood actors had types, upon which they'd do slight variations.

This week sees the release of "American Ultra." Jesse Eisenberg plays a sleeper-agent-turned-burner who doesn't remember he has Jason

'Clouds of Sils Maria'

Stewart plays the personal assistant of a harried, aging actress (Juliette Binoche) who, like Stewart herself, was once a hot young thing.

'Still Alice'

Not only did she hold her own with Binoche; Stewart held her own with Julianne Moore as well, watching in horror as the Oscar winner is slowly undone by Alzheimer's.

'Camp X-Ray'

As a Gitmo guard who befriends one

The best of KStew

of the detainees ("A Separation"'s fantastic Peyman Moaadi), Stewart brings subtlety and nuance to a subject that needs it.

'The Runaways'

Turns out Stewart does a mean young Joan Jett.

'Panic Room'

As a tomboyish teen, Stewart got her big break in David Fincher's home invasion thriller, playing daughter to Jodie Foster, a child actor-turned-adult star just like her.

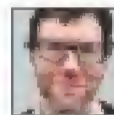

Bourne moves until they're awoken. Stewart plays his equally hard-toking girlfriend who helps him as they flee assassins.

The movie has tonal issues; some actors are broad, some serious. Stewart is on the serious side. She brings real, deep feeling to a character with real, deep love for her partner. She shoots characters hard, anguished stares. She does a lot with very little. She's not particularly funny in this sort-of-comedy, nor is she asked to be. She's the film's rock — the power that gives it more weight than it perhaps deserves. This shouldn't be surprising, and it shouldn't be think piece-worthy. After all, she has a Cesar, bitches.

Patrick Stewart doesn't want to offend

The acclaimed actor can't wait for "Blunt Talk" to let him get his Jon Stewart on.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Sir Patrick Stewart is a proud Brooklynite, but the acclaimed actor was out of town for most of last winter, in Los Angeles shooting "Blunt Talk," premiering on Starz Saturday at 9 p.m. He plays a castrous political news anchor of the Piers Morgan variety, only more prone to drug use.

On "Blunt Talk," Patrick Stewart plays a news anchor who at one point dreams that he's in a Busby Berkeley-style musical number. STARZ

The first episode involves a transgender character. The scene could have gone for easy laughs but it's very tolerant.

It's due to Jonathan [Ames'] own experiences and his sensitivity. We were both a little nervous about this scene and how it might appear. The scene becomes sweet, almost sentimental, where it could have been broad and coarse and offensive. I don't think it is.

In the first four episodes, it's not so much

You're a New Yorker, but it's interesting this show takes place in L.A. That's a different vibe, and the kind of satire is not the same as it would be in New York.

We spent a lot of time talking about that — "New York or L.A., where should it be?" I felt that L.A. — with no offense to Manhattan — offered perhaps more exotic potential to tell Walter's story. Also, I was here on Broadway doing a play all the way through the winter season of 2013-2014 ["No Man's Land," with Ian McKellen]. And it was, at that time, the second-worst winter on record. I swore I would not live through it again. Then, as it proved, last winter was the worst winter on record. It was so pleasant in California. Weekends I would get up in January and put on a pair of shorts and flip-flops. I felt a little bad about my friends back here in Manhattan, struggling through the winter.

a political show as it is about characters.

I hope in time it will be seen to be both. We spent a lot of time — Jonathan, rather, did — building all the characters, giving them substance. I would like to see it get more political — because I am and have been all my life. I'd like to start banging the desk a little bit in a Jon Stewart manner. I've been practicing my Jon Stewart gestures for when that moment comes.

'Diary' is an empathetic study of teen horniness

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Generally — and with good reason — we tend to view age-inappropriate relationships as wrong, especially when one of the lovers is a teen. "The Diary of a Teenage Girl" entertains the idea that maybe they aren't all bad — to a point, at least.

Based on a semi-autobiographical book by Phoebe Gloeckner that's part graphic novel, part diary, it details the affair between a high schooler, Minnie (Bel Powley) and Monroe (Alexander Skarsgard), a strapping 30-something. To make matters worse, he's dating her mom, Charlotte (Kristen Wiig). It's all very Bad Idea Jeans, and yet Monroe, charmingly played by Skarsgard, isn't a slimy predator, and, skeezy though it all is, he and Minnie make a more compatible couple than he and her mom. It won't last, but for a time, their love offers a comfortable, rewarding oblivion like any other satisfying-yet-doomed relationship.

Kristen Wiig, Bel Powley and Alexander Skarsgard are engaged in a bizarre love triangle in "The Diary of a Teenage Girl," out Friday. SONY PICTURES CLASSICS

Granted, "Diary" isn't just a film about teen horniness; it's a subjective missive beaming from the mind of a young woman dealing messily with messy feelings. In its final stretch, "Teenage Girl" comes close to being one of those reactionary salvos that seems sex-positive only to ultimately punish its protagonist(s) for cutting loose. The pat conclusion, complete with narration about What I Learned, does, however, arrive after nearly two hours of emotional chaos, showing real empathy toward youthful pulchritude and mature pulchritude alike. The movie captures the way that, especially as youths, we like to tear ourselves down, build anew, then start all over again. And it captures how adults do the same thing.

they accidentally get their brains eaten. It's a real risk, because "Fear the Walking Dead" is about the beginning of the zombie apocalypse, before anyone knows about zombies. Here's what you can expect.

1 You won't be any less freaked out

Knowing what's going to happen doesn't make the events any less scary. If anything, it's all the more anxiety-inducing, because you're watching a group of people who don't know that they should be scared. At least in "The Walking Dead," everyone knows their lives are in danger. But no one on this show has any reason to think that dark empty buildings, or shambling strangers, could be something more sinister, and they engage with all the blind confidence of the zombie-free.

2 Everything is tragic

An unanswered text message. Plans for teenagers to visit colleges. A fight with a family member. They're all small, unimportant events in the grand scheme of modern-day life, but watching these things happen within a group of people whose lives you know are about to be irrevocably changed imbues even the most humdrum of events with an air of deep tragedy. Their lives as they know them are over, but they don't know it yet.

3 Survival of the fittest hasn't occurred yet

Rick Grimes was a former cop, tough, smart and competent, and many of the people he meets up with are just as weathered and canny. But in "Fear the Walking Dead," everyone is still alive, and not particularly prepared to fight for their lives. The two leads are a guidance counselor and an English teacher, respectively. There are kind nurses, sulky teenagers and, notably, drug addicts. Much of the action in the premiere takes place through the eyes of Nick (Frank Dillane), a young heroin addict who can't even be sure he should believe what's happening to him.

4 It's just as gruesome as the original series

If all of that makes you think you're watching some sad drama with no action, rest assured, this is still a "Walking Dead" show. There's gore from the very beginning, kill shots in the pilot and all the half-torn-away faces any zombie fan could desire.

'American Ultra'

Director: Nima Nourizadeh
Stars: Jesse Eisenberg,
 Kristen Stewart
Rating: R

"American Ultra" is what could be called a "theoretical movie." It certainly sounds like a good time. The hook is that Jesse Eisenberg — gentle, shy and here a stoner — kills people. He's Mike, a burner in small-town Louisiana who's also, unbeknownst to himself, a sleeper agent for the CIA, fighting to stay alive when a hissable official (Topher Grace) sends assassins to take him out. And yet "American Ultra" mostly sits there on the screen. It's like a good joke ruined by clumsy telling.

Part of that is tone; part of that is a crisis of identity. It wants to be a silly, cartoonish violent action-comedy in which Eisenberg kills people with spoons and dispenses head trauma and {gulp} teeth trauma. It also wants to be a sensitive look at a relationship between Mike and Phoebe, played by his "Adventureland" crush Kristen Stewart. It's two movies: one a broad, bloody farce, the other an "indie" drama that fumbles bringing the tomfoolery down to earth.

Oddly, it's the serious side

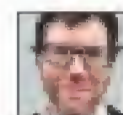

Jesse Eisenberg and Kristen Stewart enjoy a brief respite in the action-comedy "American Ultra," playing perpetually taking lovers trying to stay alive.
 ALAN MARSHFIELD

that comes closer to working. The comedy vies for "Veep"-style cynicism, but it mostly seems like a bad imitation. Grace spends most of the film just deploying F-bombs like a little boy who just discovered cuss words. Even the gimmick of the guy Eisenberg whipping out left field hurtbombs becomes repetitive.

Eisenberg, to his credit, doesn't overplay the shtick. He's trying to play a real character, though there's not a ton of character to play. Nor is there with Phoebe, who as written is little more than "the Girlfriend." Stewart isn't particularly funny here, but what she does is bring a real depth of feeling. She and Eisenberg may help kill the comedy, but they elevate the drama. M

Let Greta Gerwig be your guide through chaos

MATT PRIGGE
 @mattprigge
 matt.prigge@metro.us

"Everyone I love dies," Greta Gerwig's Brooke slips in between two lighthearted one-liners. It comes so fast and out of nowhere that an inattentive viewer could miss it entirely — just one of many splutterings that spurt forth in a never-ceasing geyser of quotables. Brooke has a chaotic New York life, a patchwork of odd jobs and questionable living spaces. The film — Gerwig and filmmaker Noah Baumbach's second screenwriting team-up, after "Frances Ha" — is also chaotic, though in a more controlled way. It's a study of female friendship that eventually turns into a screwball comedy that soon becomes about unwitting betrayal, all of it held together through pluck and hustle and bubble gum — the same way Brooke ekes out her existence.

The real hero is Lola Kirke's Tracy, an impressionable freshman who quickly falls under her sway. Their misadventures are cut short mid-film by a trip to a New England manse populated by equally gabby grotesques. But "Mistress America" has a bigger surprise up its sleeve, turning, as Baumbach's "While We're Young" recently did, into a study of the ethics of representation, this time in fiction rather than in documentary. The gearshift sticks better than it did there, but even if it didn't, "Mistress America" would still be a charmer, not unlike the way Brooke is able to charm her young charge. One goes along with it grasping the theater's armchairs à la a roller coaster car, emerging with the kind of whiplash that makes you get right back in line.

Aries Keep your comments to yourself, regardless of how hard that is. You will end up in a compromising position if you step in the middle.

Taurus Focus on your finances. A new project or a side business will turn out to be profitable. Work hard and do your best.

Gemini Romance is evident. Make plans for a special rendezvous. If single, you will meet someone intriguing. Get your work out of the way.

Cancer Don't let anyone emotionally blackmail you. You will be more respected if you stand up for yourself and your principles.

Leo Cultivate friendships with co-workers. Seminars and meetings will be excellent opportunities to find potential allies.

Virgo Don't be afraid to try something different. A new approach will result in a significant change. You can raise your earning power.

Libra You will feel emotionally challenged. Use your energy wisely and put your effort into creative outlets that bring you joy.

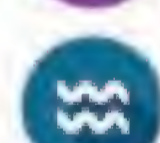

Scorpio Question the motives of someone who is trying very hard to get on your good side. It's likely that this person is trying to undermine you.

Sagittarius You can make a difference. Donate your time and energy to helping those in need. You will receive positive recognition.

Capricorn Maintain a balance between your personal and professional responsibilities. Divide your time and attention wisely.

Aquarius You can get a lot done if you start early. Rank your tasks in order of importance to avoid wasting time. Don't bother asking others for help.

Pisces Rather than complain about a situation, figure out a way to change it. You have the power in yourself to make improvements. EUGENIA LAST

Kamasi Washington on jazz's place in popular music today

Kamasi Washington talks about literally dreaming up the songs for his album "The Epic," working on Kendrick Lamar's "To Pimp A Butterfly" and correcting popular misconceptions about jazz.

EMILY LAURENCE @EmLaurence
emily.laurence@metrouis.

When talking about today's popular music, jazz isn't typically the first word people think of. But Kamasi Washington, who is one of the biggest names in jazz right now, says it's infused into mainstream music more than most people realize. "There's a misuse to the genre that almost makes it a slave to the term," Washington says. "How can you really even describe 100 years worth of music, thousands of musicians and millions of songs with one word?"

Making a choice

Washington discovered jazz early in his life, largely due to the influence of his father, who is also a musician. "In L.A., you have two choices. Either

"I'm making music people relate to and calling it jazz," Kamasi Washington says. PROVIDED you're going to do something really good, or you're going to get sucked into gangs, violence, drugs and everything else," he says. Music opened up a whole new community for him.

"During the day, [friends and I] would get together and play all day, go to a band rehearsal until 2 a.m. and come back to my house and play until 4 a.m. We were pushing ourselves to be on the forefront of the jazz community," Washington says.

Gaining respect

It paid off. Right after high school, he landed a regular gig playing with Snoop Dogg, which later led to collaborations with Nas, Lauryn Hill, Flying Lotus, Herbie Hancock and many more. Most recently, Washington played saxophone and composed the strings and choir for Kendrick Lamar's album "To Pimp A Butterfly."

"Originally I was just going to write the strings for one song," he says. "But when I listened to the whole album, I would hear a bridge here or a chorus there to add strings to. So we ended up working together for multiple songs."

It was all a dream

In May, Washington released his own album, a three-hour, three-disc compilation called "The Epic," which took him four years to complete. His songs are the stuff dreams are made of — literally. "I had this crazy dream of a sky and a mountain. It was just really dramatic and music was in the dream. I could hear the whole song from beginning to end." That song became the first track, "Change The Guard."

"When I started working on a song called 'The Magnificent 7,' I had another dream. I just started having these dreams that created the story for the album," he says.

He hopes people will listen to his album and see there's more to jazz than they might imagine. "The terminology can cause a social divide even before you think about the song. ... I'm making music people can relate to and calling it jazz."

Learn to cook at the Boston Public Market

Stop feeling embarrassed about your chef skills and take a class.

CAROLINE MACNEILLE
lectars@melrose

The recent opening of Boston Public Market has given Bostonians access to all kinds of tasty goodies, from fresh cheese from Ipswich's Appleton Farms to meat and poultry from Chestnut Farms in Hardwick.

But if the thought of a big bag of fresh produce leaves you at a loss, rest assured — the Market will provide. The Kitchen, a new communal space in the Market that will be used for cooking classes, opened yesterday.

"We will be having rotating classes that are held on a seasonal basis, infused with one-time-a-year events featuring local chefs or experts on sustainability, wellness and fitness," says Mimi Hall, Boston Public Market program manager. Expect classes on a range of topics and even weekly offerings from local experts at America's Test Kitchen that "teach beginner students how to think and act like a home cook."

Roughly one-third of the events will be free; another third will be low-cost, ranging from $5 to $20, and the rest will go up to $60 per class. All of the courses were designed to be accessible to the general public, providing easy and affordable opportunities to learn about the basics of cooking and ways to use local ingredients.

"Everything that we're using in the kitchen will be available on the market floor," says Hall. "You won't find us featuring strawberry shortcake in the middle of winter. We really want to help people cook with the seasons."

Scotland didn't invent alcohol, though it might as well have done it, given the number of historic distilleries there are to visit.

Who gets the title "Scotland's oldest distillery" is open to argument, as historical records are not always clear — and it also depends on your criteria. But here are six of the oldest that can still be visited, in alphabetical order.

Balblair

Balblair in Ross-shire was founded in 1790, but the present buildings date to 1895, when it was rebuilt. As well as touring the distillery, you can choose one of their whiskies to fill your own bottle and add your own label. www.balblair.com

Beyond the whisky

It may be hard to believe, but there are Scottish distilleries that don't make whisky! Gin has become increasingly popular. Here are four of Scotland's top gins.

The Botanist: Made by Bruichladdich on Islay, where there are eight malt whisky distilleries, this gin uses 22 foraged island botanicals. www.thebotanist.com Edinburgh Gin: Edinburgh now has its own gin distillery. Various tours are available, as well as the chance to make your own gin.

Crossbill: Crossbill claims to be the only Scottish gin using 100 percent Scottish juniper, helping to revive the country's juniper business. The gin is made on the Inshriach Estate in Aviemore. www.crossbillgin.com

Caorunn: Made in the traditional whisky heartland of Speyside at the Balmenach Distillery, which dates back to 1824, Caorunn was recently voted one of the world's 10 best gins. www.caorunngin.com was the first of many distilleries on the island of Islay off the west coast of Scotland — and eight of them are still open! www.bowmore.com

Glen Garioch

Glen Garioch in Aberdeenshire prints its 1797 foundation date on every bottle, but there are records showing it was in operation as early as 1785. You can find out more on a distillery visit. www.glengarioch.com

Glenturret

Glenturret in Crieff claims to be

Scotland's oldest distillery, thanks to a license dating from 1775. It closed for a long period due to the effects of prohibition, but it came back and is well-known for The Famous Grouse. experience.thefamousgrouse.com

Strathisla

Strathisla's claim to fame is that it remains the oldest continuously operating distillery in Scotland. It retains many of its original buildings and was founded in 1786 in Keith. www.maltwhiskydistilleries.com

Erie Canal in Rochester

Erie-Champlain Canal Boat Company

Cruising New York's canals

For a unique way to experience New York's countryside, try a leisurely, self-captured cruise on a flat-bottomed narrowboat.

Colorful and cozy, narrowboats are descendants of the craft that plied the Erie Canal in the 1800s. Back then, power came from teams of mules pulling the barges. Nowadays, diesel engines do the work (but the pace is about the same). You'll meander through some of the loveliest, least developed areas of northern New York at about 7 mph. You set your own itinerary, visiting towns and museums, biking to wineries or just drifting along and savoring the scenery. Towns along the canal have public docks with a low tie-up fee, if any.

Narrowboats sleep up to six people and are self-contained with fully equipped kitchens, linens and towels, and necessary fuel and nautical gear. If you really can't stand being unplugged, some boats have Wi-Fi. Novice mariners get complete instructions on driving the boats, navigating the canals and managing the locks. Lockmasters are used to helping newbies quickly pick up the procedures. Kids love the whole adventure.

The New York State Canal System website (www.canals.ny.gov) has a lot of information, as do the four listed boat rental operators who specialize in narrowboats.

Erie Canal Cruise Lines (www.canalcruises.com) specializes in trips along the Erie Canal and the Finger Lakes. Erie-Champlain Canal Boat Company (www.eccboating.com) offers routes along the Erie Canal or north to Lake Champlain. They also have daytrips along the canal in Waterford.

Low Bridge Charters (www.lowbridgecharters.com) also focuses on the Erie Canal; their staff helps plan itineraries to ensure those new to the experience don't miss anything. Mid-Lakes Navigation (www.macedonlanding.com) has various-size boats for trips along the Erie and Cayuga-Seneca canals, as well as daytrips from downtown Syracuse.

Dave Dombrowski is now in charge of baseball operations with the Red Sox.

DOMBROWSKI HERE TO FIX TALENT ISSUE

I've said it all along. The Boston Red Sox have a talent issue. And that falls on the general manager.

So when news broke — during the eighth inning of Tuesday night's 9-1 win over the Cleveland Indians — that the Sox hired Dave Dombrowski as president of baseball operations, it wasn't a major surprise. It made even more sense when the team's announcement included that Ben Cherington was stepping down as Red Sox GM.

The Sox didn't seem like a perfect fit for Dombrowski after he was fired by the Detroit Tigers two weeks ago, unless of course, Cherington was on his way out. And even though Dombrowski said that he was "hoping Ben would stay," there's no way anyone involved thought that would happen if Dombrowski was hired.

First, put yourself in Cherington's shoes. Dombrowski joins Jerry Dipoto as the second former GM to join the Red Sox in the last month. Both were general managers of Major League teams this season for crying out loud. If I was Cherington, that wouldn't make me feel too comfortable.

The addition of Dombrowski — and his new "President of Baseball Operations" title — would be enough for me to pack my bags. And apparently, the same goes for Cherington. Because he's now leaving. Or shall I say, being forced out.

Again, the Red Sox must have known that Dombrowski and Cherington would never coexist. Cherington won a World Series two years ago. His 2013 Red Sox eliminated Dombrowski's Tigers in the ALCS. And now Dombrowski will be

So did Dombrowski.

But don't get me wrong. I'm not saying I dislike the move. I just think the Red Sox wanted Cherington gone. Cherington probably feels that way at least. And he's probably right.

But you've heard it all before. It's a results-based business. And the last two seasons, Cherington's Red Sox have been as bad as we've ever seen in Boston. They have a talent issue. And again, that falls on the general manager.

If you want someone new calling the shots this winter, then Dombrowski is the right man for the job. If nothing else, Dombrowski seems to be willing to make the big trade, something I'm not too sure Cherington wanted to do.

The Red Sox need an ace. Dombrowski said as much during his introductory press conference on Wednesday. The question is, how do you get that guy? You can either bank on the kids like Eduardo Rodriguez, Henry Owens and Brian Johnson. Or you can go out and make a blockbuster trade and hope that you don't hold onto "potential" for too long. Dombrowski seems more likely to make that big trade. And that's why I'm signing off on this Red Sox front-office shake-up.

Cherington should be applauded for his 2013 championship creation. But when you follow up a World Series hangover with a rotation that consists of a group of guys having to wear T-shirts in order to convince the entire city that there is an ace somewhere in the bunch, your job can't be too secure. Not in this town, anyway.

And as we get set to enter this coming offseason, the Red Sox need to make a few big moves to fix their talent issue.

I'm happy to say, that duty will now ultimately fall on Dombrowski.

overlooking Cherington's duties?

The powers-that-be on Yawkey Way knew that Cherington — even though his teams have been a disaster the last two seasons — had more pride than that.

Butler, Patriots ready to tackle Saints

The Patriots are in West Virginia participating in joint practices with the New Orleans Saints before the two teams go at it Saturday night.

For the Patriots, this is business as usual. They have at least one joint practice during every preseason — and it's their third one against the Saints. Bill Belichick likes having his guys mix it up with another team. It gives them a chance to not only scout their own players better, but also players who may become available from the opposing team.

But while the Patriots are focusing on the Saints this week, they're also beginning to look at film of early opponents in the regular season as well as their remaining preseason opponents.

"Really, now is the time of year when a lot of times you're looking at three, four, five different teams — New Orleans, getting ahead on Carolina, the Giants, Pittsburgh, obviously — teams in the early part of the schedule just to kind of start to get a feel for them of what [they] did in the offseason," Belichick said. "Is that kind of what we're seeing now in training camp or preseason games from them? Are they doing something different?"

These are questions the Pats will hope to answer this week and the coming weeks. Let's zone in on their game against the Saints.

Brady or Garoppolo?

Tom Brady ended up skipping Wednesday's Deflategate hearing because he knew it was pointless and instead joined his team in West Virginia for practice. With all the hullabaloo surrounding Brady, it'll be interesting to see how many drives he gets this weekend. He got just two in the first preseason game. That said, as of now he's still suspended through the first four games, and Jimmy Garoppolo needs all the reps he can get.

Cornering Brees

Assuming Drew Brees gets some run against the Patriots, it'll be a nice test for the secondary. By all accounts, Malcolm Butler has been the team's best cornerback and his starting job looks like a lock.

Newcomer Tarell Brown has also emerged from the group and is making a case for the other starting job. He didn't play against the Packers but keep your eyes on Brown as he looks to limit Saints wide receiver Brandin Cooks, who is all the rage right now. Rookie safety Jordan Richards has also impressed so far, playing in multiple spots against the Packers. He already looks like a Belichick guy.

Gronk, Amendola and ... ?

Julian Edelman, Brandon LaFell, Aaron Dobson and Scott Chandler have missed the majority, or all of camp, and don't figure to play this weekend, either. Gronkowski was a healthy scratch against the Packers but should get some burn against the Saints. Meanwhile, pay attention to Josh Boyce, who had a rough outing against the Packers. JAMES TOSCANO

LEGAL NOTICES

MORTGAGEE'S NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue and in execution of the Power of Sale contained in a certain Mortgage given by Margaret A. Manno and Richard C. Marino to GreenPark Mortgage Corporation, DBA GPMC, dated July 29, 2005 and recorded with the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds at Book 37680, Page 316, assigned to Taylor, Bean & Whitaker Mortgage Corp. by GreenPark Mortgage Corporation, DBA GPMC, by assignment recorded in said Registry of Deeds in Book 37680, Page 330 subsequently assigned to Owen Loan Servicing, LLC by Taylor, Bean & Whitaker Mortgage Corp., by assignment recorded in said Registry of Deeds in Book 47585, Page 307, subsequently assigned to Nationstar Mortgage LLC by Owen Loan Servicing, LLC, by assignment recorded in said Registry of Deeds in Book 51566, Page 152, of which the Mortgage the undersigned is the present holder, for breach of the conditions of said Mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same will be sold at Public Auction at 10:00 AM on September 3, 2015 at 15 Prospect Circle, Boston (Hyde Park District), MA, all and singular the premises described in said Mortgage, to wit:

The land with the buildings thereon situated on Prospect Circle in part of Boston called Hyde Park being shown as Lot G on a plan entitled "Plan of Land Boston, Massachusetts (Hyde Park District)" dated May 14, 1964 by a A.L. Ialuna, Surveyor and recorded in Suffolk Registry of Deeds, Book 7894, Page 471.

Southwesterly by land of owners unknown, twenty-four and 29/100 (24.29) feet;
Southerly by land owners unknown, one hundred nineteen and 99/100 (119.99) feet;
Easterly by Lot H on said plan, fifty-eight and 45/100 (58.45) feet; Northerly by a radius on Prospect Circle, forty and 88/100 (40.88) feet; and Westerly by Lot E on said plan, one hundred and 66/100 (100.66) feet.
Containing 6,546 square feet of land, more or less.

For my title see deed of Joanne Grabowski aka Josephine Grabowski aka Joanne Gray recorded herewith.

The premises are to be sold subject to and with the benefit of all easements, restrictions, building and zoning laws, unpaid taxes, tax titles, water bills, municipal liens and assessments, rights of tenants and parties in possession.

TERMS OF SALE:

A deposit of FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS AND 00 CENTS ($5,000.00) in the form of a certified check or bank treasurer's check will be required to be delivered at or before the time the bid is offered. The successful bidder will be required to execute a Foreclosure Sale Agreement immediately after the close of the bidding. The balance of the purchase price shall be paid within thirty (30) days from the sale date in the form of a certified check, bank treasurer's check or other check satisfactory to Mortgagee's attorney. The Mortgagee reserves the right to bid at the sale, to reject any and all bids, to continue the sale and to amend the terms of the sale by written or oral announcement made before or during the foreclosure sale. If the sale is set aside for any reason, the Purchaser at the sale shall be entitled only to a return of the deposit paid. The purchaser shall have no further recourse against the Mortgagor, the Mortgagee or the Mortgagee's attorney. The description of the premises contained in said mortgage shall control in the event of an error in this publication. TIME WILL BE OF THE ESSENCE.

Other terms if any, to be announced at the sale.

TRUST CITATION

Docket No. SU15P1572P0

Commonwealth of Massachusetts
The Trial Court
Probate and Family Court

In the matter of:
The James A. Rowse, Sr.
Grandchildren's Trust Dated September 14, 1981

Suffolk Probate and Family Court
24 New Chardon Street
Boston, MA 02114
(617) 788-8300

To all interested persons:

A Petition has been filed by: Samuel Rowse as Trustee of New London NH requesting the Trustees pray that this Court enter the following decree and order:

A. That the modifications to the Trust set forth in Exhibit A attached to this General Trust Petition are not inconsistent with a material purpose of the Trust;

B. That, pursuant to M.G.L., c.
203E, §303, the grandchildren and adult great-grandchildren who are beneficiaries of the Trust may as parents represent and bind their minor children and any unborn children;

C. That the grandchildren's and adult great-grandchildren's assents to the Modifications and to this General Trust Petition on their own behalf and on behalf of their minor and unborn children constitute binding consents of all beneficiaries of the Trust within the meaning of M.G.L., c. 203E, §411(b);

D. To the extent that there may be other unborn beneficiaries and unascertained beneficiaries of the Trust not otherwise represented, they are, as provided in M.G.L., c. 203E, §304, bound by the beneficiaries assenting to this petition inasmuch as they will have substantially identical interests to those of the assenting beneficiaries with respect to the Modifications and there is no conflict of interest.

E. With respect to any beneficiary who has not assented to the Modifications, the Court is satisfied that the interests of that beneficiary are adequately protected (M.G.L.
c. 203E, §411(c)) by the assent of other beneficiaries with substantially identical interests.

F. That the Modifications are therefore approved; and

G. That the Court grant such other relief as it may deem just and equitable.

You have the right to obtain a copy of the Petition from the Petitioner or at the Court. You have a right to object to this proceeding. To do so, you or your attorney must file a written appearance and objection at this Court before 10:00 a.m. on 09/03/2015.

This is NOT a hearing date, but a deadline by which you must file a written appearance and objection
if you object to this proceeding.
If you fail to file a timely written appearance and objection followed by an Affidavit of Objections within thirty (30) days of the return date, action may be taken without further notice to you.

WITNESS, Hon. Joan P. Armstrong, First Justice of this Court.
